A NOTABLE OUTING

The Hui Hele Loa outing club carried through a very successful outing last Saturday in spite of unpromising weather conditions and leaden skies.

At 2:30 every last man of the club was on hand at the mouth of the river at Wailua for the motor boat trip up the river and the barge was so filled to overflowing that some of the lighter and more adventurous spirits went forward into the steerage on the motor boat. With manifold wraps and raincoats they looked like a north pole party in high latitudes. The veteran pilot of many seasons thought they were going to be a glum and pious lot, but before he got through with them, his celestial face relaxed into a broad grin and he said: "Too much foolery kind,—no see before!"

When the flotilla reached the rice plantation where the veteran rice planter and owner of the motor boat, Chan Chip, lives, the crowd insisted on having him out and giving him three rousing cheers to which he responded with the hesitation and modesty of a new experience.

On the way Mr. Lydgate, the leader of the expedition, pointed out the various points of interest and related the Hawaiian stories connected with them. Unfortunately the south branch was too shallow for the heavy barge, so that they had to forego the visit to the Mermaidens Home, and the chance of seeing one of these bewitching creatures. Instead they went ashore at the poi factory and hiked up along the ditch under beautiful overarching trees, to Kalua-hole, a populous Hawaiian village in ancient times, as is attested by the great grove of mango and breadfruit trees, which still remain.

A few moments of inspection were given to the poi factory,—where a big batch of taro was in the imu all ready for steaming,—and everyone was pleased with the cleanliness and sanitary wholesomeness of the place. But to the malihini mind the most wonderful thing there was an old Chinaman smoking a big bamboo water filled pipe. They would like to have brought away the pipe, China man and all.

Leisurely returning, they reached the mouth of the river about dusk.

Selecting a sheltered spot on the beach, a rousing big bonfire was made, with smaller ones for cooking. Canvas tarpaulins were spread down, and in no time a delicious supper was ready, which was doubly welcome to everybody.

The evening about the bonfire was most delightful and was rendered the more so by singing, stories, impersonations, etc. Everyone enjoyed it all thoroughly and the common consensus was—"Why don't we do that often," and "we will." In spite of overcast skies and threatening prospects not a drop of rain fell.

ON THE TRAIL OF MOONSHINE

It is significant of the commonness of that sort of thing, that a hiking party, recently, with one minister in the lead, and another in the rear, stumbled into a moonshine camp with the booze in process of manufacture. It was in a secluded valley safe from any ordinary disturbance.

The first spasm of consternation was followed by a diplomatic air of innocence and virtue, and the assurance that they were so careful and particular about their drinking water that they had to distill it. Neither the taste nor the smell indicated distilled water, however.

Miss Fryer's kitchen girls operated a soda and cone dispensary in connection with the show. Mr. Ferreira acted as business manager and general property man. The show netted well over two hundred dollars. The money will be used to put on a big Christmas tree the last day of school. Mrs. Wright cannot be praised too highly for her efforts to make the program a success. It has meant special preparation by her and her assistants for many weeks back. Music was furnished by an excellent Filipino orchestra.

Mr. Ryan, Territorial Industrial Supervisor, made the vocational department a visit on Wednesday. He was accompanied by Mr. Pugh.
